FARMER SPOTLIGHT

CACAO from ECUADOR

In Ecuador, we partner with the Fortaleza del Valle co-operative. As partners, we helped co-finance a laboratory where staff can make small batches of chocolate from the cacao they grow. This allows the co-op to evaluate their cacao in the same way buyers do, giving more power to the farmers and increasing the value of the product!

After coffee cherries are picked, they must be depulped within 24 hours to separate the coffee beans from the outer flesh.

Farmer Spotlight

COFFEE from ETHIOPIA
In Ethiopia, we work with the Sidama Coffee Farmers Cooperative Union, which represents 85,000 small-scale farmers. Our Ethiopian coffees are all naturally processed (also called dry processed), which means no water is used to remove the fruit from the coffee seed. This gives the coffee a distinctive fruity flavor!

This fundraiser is different

Your purchase supports more than just your school or community's projects: it helps support farmers worldwide!

Equal Exchange trades fairly and directly with over 40 small farmer co-operatives to bring you delicious coffee, chocolate, tea and more. Our partners receive pre-harvest credit, above-market prices for their crops, plus an additional Fair Trade premium that can be invested in social programs, farm renovation, and other essential projects.

Your support helps promote a more equitable, sustainable and democratic food system. Thank you!

What is it? MATCHING GAME

Where does chocolate come from? And what in the world is rooibos? Test your food knowledge by matching the crops pictured in the top row with the finished products below.

A B C D

1 2 3 4

A delicious cup of tea. B Coffee seedlings growing from the dirt are grown by small farmers and traded to enhance the lives of each member of the cooperative. C Rooibos, which grows only in the dry South African climate, is brewed into an invigorating tea. D-Cacao pods harvested in the Amazon are the basis for delicious chocolate bars!
